What do you call 265 people packed into Emerson Hall in late August '90 to be told how the next four years would be a living hell? The IUSOM Class of 1994 during orientation. All the fear and anticipation we had tried to drink away the previous summer suddenly became reality when they were immortalized on our faces by a mug shot that would follow us everywhere we went for the next few years.

Most people were friendly and bonded quickly while spending long days in class and longer nights in the library. Emotions could ride up and down like a roller coaster with the mounting stress before an exam. Just when you thought it was time to go home, you realized you still had to go over the structures of the amino acids again (by the way, how many times have you used that since the test?). On top of that, there was always some gunner pulling an all-nighter in Med-Sci before the Micro exam.

As time wound down, so did the attendance at lectures. Once people learned that having class notes meant the 8, 11, and 1 o'clock hours were optional, it was very easy to get a seat close enough to see the whites of Dr. Bauer's eyes. The difficult task was finding a table to play cards in the basement at lunchtime. I think I learned more about Euchre than reverse transcriptase.

Although most found their social lives greatly restricted during this year, people still found ways to enjoy the free time available. M.D.unks and Abracadavers found a good deal of success in the intramural arena at the Natatorium, parties were held at Walden and Jackson St., and a number of classmates made it to the Christmas Dance at the Convention Center. I also remember rumors about someone dressed as synecyium man crawling on stage at Brad's Gold Club around Halloween time, and something about oil wrestling with models at the Tijuana Yacht Club during Monday Night Football.

May never sounded so good as it did the Spring of '91. We were burnt out, tired out, out of money, and ready for one last free summer.

The second year of medical school, the wonder year. I wonder why the hell I came back. After a relaxing summer doing the HME program, research, or some non-medical activities, the class gathered in our new lecture home, Emerson Hall. Familiar faces were tanned and revitalized, and, in addition, there were some new faces — some from god awful places like Kansas. They told us we had a new schedule consisting of semesters instead of trimesters. The fact is we still had lecture all week, studied all weekend, and took tests each Monday. Big change, huh?

The year seemed exciting as we donned the new white coats and went off to the hospital to learn how to use all the expensive equipment we now owned. We were seeing real live patients, learning real medicine, and taking a step closer to being real doctors. Nevertheless, we were put back in place each week by tests that remotely resembled what was talked about in class (like the pharm test over antibiotics which completely ignored the drugs' uses and instead asked about routes of elimination).

On a sad note, Dr. Powell, director of the medicine course, died suddenly and unexpectedly. While this may have impacted each person differently, he should be remembered as a knowledgeable teacher and caring individual.

Meanwhile, life seemed to trudge along and almost leave us behind, as it was difficult to keep in touch with the outside world. While most of us rooted for IU to win another NCAA championship, the cooler carriers continued to spend their lives in the library enjoying an occasional game of lunchbox bowling.

The end of the year rushed by in quite a blur. Through the Freshman Review we shared the words of wisdom of instructors like Dr. O'Connor with the first year class. Then, as soon as the last final was over, we turned our heads toward yet another small hurdle — Boards I. In addition to showing us how much we still didn't know, this exam taught us another important lesson: If you're going to try to buy the exam before test day, offer the guard more than 5 grand. — Mark Mattern

Top: Looking forward to clinicals, we celebrated at our class' Boards II party. Middle: Holly Mattix demonstrates a habit some of us acquired the previous 2 years. Above: We were finally practicing on real patients. Ok, Eric, almost all of them were real!

Well, here is a story about our third year in a nutshell. The year consisted of OB/GYN, Medicine, Psych, Family Practice, and Pediatrics. And, as I try to concentrate and block it out of my mind, those dreaded thoughts of Surgery rush through my mind like a swarm of bats in a wind-tunnel. Alas, those hypnotic amnesia courses I have been taking failed me once again, and that dreaded post-traumatic stress disorder that I swore to myself I had beaten returns once again. Maybe if I tell you all my story and you all say to yourself at the end, "John, you can beat this disorder", perhaps I may. I know it sounds like a story out of Peter Pan, but if you believe, you'll clap your hands for me.

So where do I begin . . . B-Team (need I say more) . . . I got the short end of the stick when I picked rock instead of scissors (good 'ol rock), and I was forced to do a surgery called "Aorto-bifem-bipop-reverse saphenous graph double somersault with a twist special sauce lettuce cheese repair". Great. I'm sure I won't have to stay for the whole thing, though. And my mask and mouth hit the floor when the grimy resident said, "This is going to be a long one. If I have to stay in here, you have to stay in here. I hope you went to the bathroom." I didn't.

So we start the case at 0745 hrs, and the resident tells me to stand behind him and wait. Unbeknownst to me this was the highlight of my day. So, I wait, standing behind them for 4 and ½ hrs, and the song by 10000 maniacs "These are the Days" fills my head. At 1300 hrs, the kind-hearted staff surgeon weasel says "Hold this and don't move it. And shut up." (I take the weasel part back and withhold all names due to the fact that I really want my diploma — remember now sticks and stones).

So I hold this retractor for, no kidding 45 minutes without flinching, and the next thing I hear is, "8*#$%@, I said stop moving the retractor and hold it like this", and my hands are repositioned. This type of scenario goes on for 3-4 more hrs. And, by 1600 hrs, I am ready to quit medical school once and for all. "I am in a world of *$&%#@."

Once more I am repositioned, and the staff surgeon is directly in front of me with my left arm under his left arm, holding a retractor. Now, nevermind the aseptic technique of this position, but think about the sexual connotation of this viewpoint (at least I'm in the driver's seat). Anyway, . . . unknown to the surgeon, the retractor I'm holding is hooked onto that circular thing that holds the belly open (ah, my surgical skills shine through once again). Basically, I'm holding something that can't move (felt like a pot of gold at the time). So I say to myself, "Just stand there and don't move. You can at least do this right".

So a little while later, I hear jerk-o in front of me comment in his usual fashion that the sucker sucks. I can only snicker to myself because anything that can go wrong at this point I like. I then notice this long winding sucker cord on the ground. I pray that what has happened is only a dream, but you know what's next. I'm standing on the "sucking" cord!

So I raise my foot ever so slightly, and we all hear this gigantic "shoosh!!!" noise that is unmistakable for what I've done. The staff surgeon swung around to me, about knocking me over, and gives me this unyielding snarl. He says, "You standing on that sucker cord?" I say, gingerly, "Yes, sir". "Well, keep the hell of it, you blankety-blank-blank", he replies and spins back around.

I realize at this point that it's true — I can't even stand there and do that right. I then start this loud, hysterical laughter that continues for 30 minutes, and the men in the white jackets soon come in to take me away.

That's it, third year from a distance. Now remember your deal. Clap if you believe. Someday I'll be cured. Until that day, see you in therapy.

— Davy

The summer of 1993 was not exactly the Summer of Love, but I did love the feeling of being a senior. It was amazing how overnight nurses began taking our orders, we could choose to do most rotations off campus, and there were no exams at the end of electives. We knew the system pretty well, and found that for some of our months staying late meant 3pm. Although the required rotations could still be a pain, we could finally choose the rest of our courses and personalize the rest of the year.

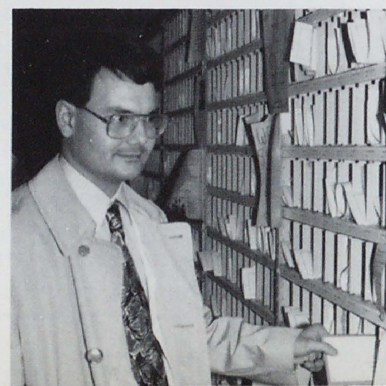

Moonlighting was now an option, and many chose to earn money by working at St. Vincent's, St. Francis, and other hospitals. Even though it was like slave labor to work twelve hour shifts in between two full days of school, nobody seemed to mind much as long as there was a cash reward. Unfortunately, this made required call nights without pay more difficult to tolerate.

Toward the end of the year, half of the class must have been married or engaged, and several had children in the crib or in the oven. (I heard one guy even searched through pictures on the wall of the nursing school of their graduates to find someone to marry!) Meanwhile, those of us that were still single tried real hard to stay that way.

The search for a residency lasted most of the year and required the busy work of writing CV's and personal statements, getting letters of recommendation and filling out applications. In many ways it was exciting to go off on interview trips to far away places like Charleston, S.C. and Phoenix. In other ways it was grueling to interview at as many as seventeen places and try to impress program directors. This also got very costly as one person admitted to $2500 in travelling expenses! (Thank goodness for those nights working in the ER).

After Match Day and finally getting an X802 paper turned in, the rest of the year began a smooth coast downhill. Whether finished by the end of April or having one month to go, everyone was ready to graduate as a DOCTOR OF MEDICINE on May 15, 1994!

Medicinal Art Lessons

It was a four year class with one requirement: use your intellect and skill to come to know the body. Twenty-two artists assembled with paintbrushes, canvases, tools, clay, fabrics . . . their materials and backgrounds were different. They would soon discover that ambition was their common, cohesive bond.

The first day the teachers explained,

"This is the body. For you to know the body you must replicate it in your mind and through your hands in infinitely different poses. The body is not static; it is not a piece of fruit in a bowl. It is a thinking, metabolizing package which presents to you for interpretation. Represent it through your work and study."

For a year the artists sculptured, painted, sketched, discussed and studied the body.

The next year the teachers said,

"The body is not static, as you have learned. Hence, it must experience change. To understand the change you must discover the world in which the body lives and master the conditions which precipitate change. Study the chemicals, the infectious agents, the genes . . . learn how the body lives, changes, and dies."

The artists represented the body in a cloud of smoke, in a crowded room of coughing children, in the forest, at the dinner table, in a bar with a drink in a hand, in a coffin . . . The body became real. The artists themselves became real. They sought their colleagues' work for enlightenment and encouragement. They became independently dependent on each other's presence, habits, likes, dislikes, strengths, weaknesses. The artists came to realize a true sense of belonging and rightness in their own lives, different than they had ever felt before.

At the end of two years the teachers said,

"To learn the body more completely you must also learn its happiness and suffering, its fortune and misfortune, its health and sickness, its responses and resistances. To learn these you must be more than you are, offer more than you have, see more than meets your eye. Learn from that which you have studied."

The students looked at each other and themselves. They realized that they were still together yet now apart, for it was time to merge with the final school of art and the congregation of the artists. More importantly, it was time to be an artist, not just study to be one.

While being, offering, seeing and learning, the twenty-two artists who had assembled years ago often found each other. With one look, one embrace, one hello, they remembered the education, the experience, the bonding and the love they all had once upon a lifetime. Every day, alone or together, they carried and lived the memories through themselves and their work. Every day they remembered that which only they could remember. Every day they shared their medicinal art lessons with the bodies and personalities of the world.

The Evansville Center

We came from different backgrounds, different parents, different lands
But we came to the Evansville Center with a common goal in hand.
Our first two years of med school were intense and time-consuming
But we managed to get through them with events we found amusing.

The first year began with excitement and glee
Despite being told to "learn everything you see."
Thank goodness we had Mark Seib, King of mnemonics
A genius with words — he must have had Phonics!

But, of course, Gross Anatomy was the class to remember
With Large Marge, Abby Normal, Bob, and Uncle Fester.
Their scent became our perfume that we wore all year.
(I guess that's how people on campus always knew when we were near!)

During the long hours we spent together while at U of E Aasha found her "pawtners", a close-knit family.
We quickly discovered each others habits and quirks
Like how Lisa got the giggles and Lance was the P.T. flirt;

Jeff was never without his baseball cap, nor Susan without her manners;
And Bolo Bandana Man was really Armand Hammer;
Kevin read Calvin and Hobbs and Beth was the "Shedding Florini"
(Her hair will forever be found in the study lounge, room 320);

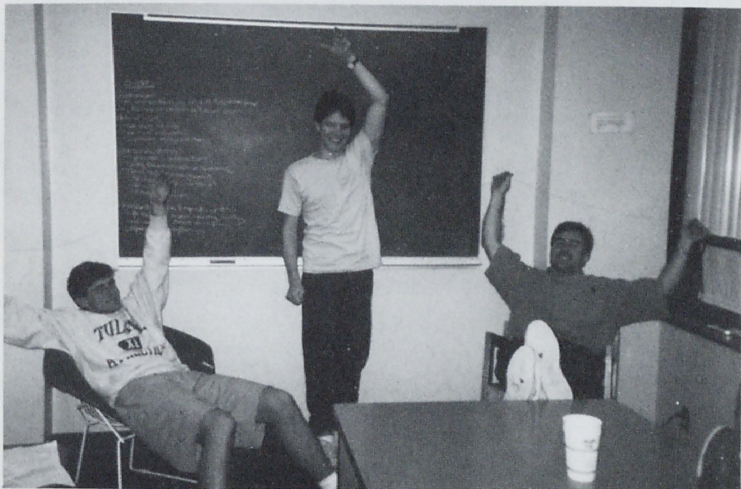

Mark had his staple chain, Sheila her dream band;
Matt and Gary got married; Dan was Dan;
Larry was our accountant, our financial consultant;
And the Kocherts and Luffs demonstrated family importance.

But the year to remember was our "Champaigne Year"
And we started it off with a toast and a cheer.
No more clusters or all-night study sessions
(Although Robbins and Kumar became our prized possession).

Pathology was the course of all courses
And though Dr. Porro may never recognize our faces, he'll always remember our 16 voices.
"Now, now, now," Dr. Shaffer would tell us,
"Physiology deals with threes and is intuitively obvious!"

While there are many more memories we 16 share
There is not enough space to record them here.
Just know, joking aside, that we worked diligently
To graduate together, to become M.D.'s

Fort Wayne

For sixteen of us, medical school began in Fort Wayne. It seemed like the last place most of us thought we would end up. Then again, many of us weren't your average medical students, either. Our class included an accountant, an EMT, a physical therapist, a veterinarian, and a young father. However different we seemed, we had a common thread — all had passed under the scrutiny of the admissions committee with approval. All the hard work had paid off. The dream of getting into medical school had been realized. The only problem was that nobody was sure what to expect next.

Our first year was the most difficult. Adjusting to the demands of medical school was tiresome and frustrating. There was little time to meet new people with our schedules. An exam was perpetually around the corner. All those pretest all-nighters studying made us wish we owned stock in Diet Coke and Maxwell House. Seemingly endless hours of studying made us wish we had a dollar for each hour we spent so we wouldn't have to fill out all those financial aid forms. Each of us found a way to deal with stress that first year. Some ran, others played hoops, and some played music. We all partied. No matter how hard we had to work, we always tried to play harder. Through it all we found the endurance to continue.

Sophomore year in Fort Wayne was heralded by the birth of Jared AuYeung. We were all amazed by Karla and how she was in class the first day, just two weeks after giving birth. Nate, Brian, Dan, Karla, and Kam all returned with wedding rings. Many of us had done summer research to jump through the X802 hoop and were glad to get back to business. We all felt better because we had survived the first year. Besides, there were now sixteen new freshmen who were even more scared than we were.

By the time National Boards Part I came around, we all seemed to feel like we had accomplished something together. We had undertaken a great challenge and had overcome. We will always have the memories of those early mornings and late evenings we spent in Fort Wayne. From time to time I am sure we will reminisce and remember the faculty, staff, families, and friends who helped us through it all and smile.

Medical education for the Class of '94 at the Northwest Center for a medical education can be captured in a few words: alternative pathway, change, and diversity. We can claim that we were the first class to go through an alternative pathway at the Indiana University School of Medicine. We will always remember the jargon of the new pathway with words like "triple jump" and "steps". With our claim to fame we had to make many changes in our two years. We adapted quite well through afternoon lunches with turkey sandwiches.

Our biggest strength and our biggest weakness was our diversity. Basil and Glyn were both involved in research and had a history at the Northwest Center. Bhasker and Skip were our engineers, and Cheryl was our expert in acute care with her history as an EMT. Zsolt and Wayne, both with training in the Bible, were the residential spiritual "experts". Scott was the natural leader with his involvement in the AMA and Student-to-Student, and we can forget about Matt, our foreigner from Delaware.

We had a lot of fun with Dave and his stories, Brigitta with her never-ending energy, and the harassment of Dan R. for daily supply of food. The families of Zsolt and Belinda were always a lot of fun at the class gatherings, and it was great to share in the beginnings of two new families. Dan W. and Randy both took the "big trip" down the aisle. We also had some sad times, with the accident of Dan R.'s brother and the death of Jeevan's parents. It was events like these that brought us together and allowed us to see beyond our medical education. May we remember all our experiences and learn from them as we have taken very diverse steps in pursuing our medical educations. — Wayne Ellis

Indianapolis

Imagine yourself in a Humphrey Bogart setting with me looking and talking like Bogey (scary enough thought as it is, but it adds character to the story) . . .

As I sit here on a lonely EKG worknight here at St. Vincent Hospital, my mind wanders over many different subjects, including that dame I met down in Daytona. Boy did she know how to . . . Then I realized, as I stumbled out of my pseudo-dementia like state, that I was back in Indiana trying to think of subject material for this project Melissa Tipton gave me. She says to me, "Do you think you could write a couple paragraphs for the yearbook on the first two years of medical school at Indianapolis?" First the extreme thought of fear and pain slammed through my mind like when that piece of excrement hits the fan in the movie "Airplane". Flashes of insidious hours spent in vain at the medical school library beckoned me back to a past that I would long soon forget. Was this some sort of post-traumatic stress disorder she was trying to fix over me, or was I just another funny guy asked to do a dirty job she didn't want to do. Well pick me, I'll take a stab at that question. No offense, Melissa, you're a hard worker, and don't you be forgetting it. Then I thought, heck, this will be easy. I'll put a couple of slams here and a couple of slams there. Nothing to it. Then I thought that if I slammed everyone I know you all would think I'm a pretty gutless individual. But listen, humor is the name of the game, and if you don't like the author, then put the book down. And besides, I don't like you all anyway, so fair is fair, I say.

Now back to the main purpose of this article. As I try to remember the great times we had together the only thing that comes to mind is that fantastic forward view you have at the third floor carrols. Imagine it. You guessed it, gray flat material. But surely there must be something else . . . Ah yes, there it is. I got it now. Boy I hate it when you run out of toilet paper, and you have to stretch while you're on the can to get a new roll from underneath the sink. Wait, where was I?

Oh, yeah. I do remember a couple of things. Here's a couple of my own personal slams: Remember that Genetics study they did on us to see if people who attended classes did better on the tests than those of us who did not attend classes? I can't remember hearing the results of that study. Something tells me the results of that study would only tell us what we already knew about medical school. Attending medical school by correspondence cannot only be done but is a highly recommended practice. Hey, studies show this to be true.

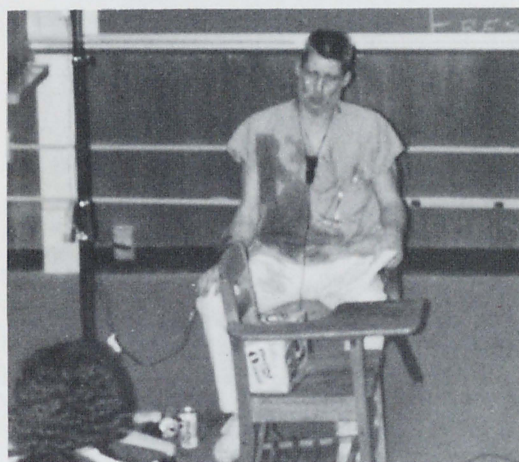

Continuing on . . . I remember talking to Dr. Hawley in regards to a particular set of questions that neither appeared in our notes nor were to be found in the book. His particular comments went something like this, "I consider test taking a learning experience. If I test you only over the material that is in the book and notes, then you will only learn that material. This way you learn new material." I considered that a fair explanation and wanted him to go one step further. Why not test us over all new material? This way we will not only know the material that we studied for, but, in addition, all this new material that we have never seen before. Humph. I never made the connection.

And here's to that great character Dr. Kubek. To this day I'm still on the run for dropping my pencil and looking up to see Cathy Scheidler's name on the top of her test paper. Cheatin! Cheatin! Cheatin! I can still hear that thunderous, obnoxious laugh in the background that sends chills down my spine when I walk back into MS326. I guess all I really need to know from Neuroanatomy is when and when not to use C7 appropriately. So let's all raise our hands high and give a C7 salute. I guess I'll never learn.

And here's to all those people who got the ax during medical school. No, I'm not talking about the big black flag. I'm talking much worse. The big "M" is what comes to mind. Yep, you guessed it, marriage. Here's to you all, because boy do I wish I were in your shoes. Really. And here's a special salute to Grandpa Riddle, who has merely prolonged and avoided that meeting with the Grim Reaper. But as we all know, as well as with the big wheel of life, that we shall all fall victim someday to the Reaper. Salute!

Of course, how could we all forget our first set of boards. Talk about material for one of those Sure deodorant commercials (my arm is down). What a great time, if I remember correctly. And shall we all salute our two fallen Kamrans-in-Arms (correction — Commrades-in-Arms). Well, all I can say is good idea, bad execution. I say no more.

So, on my final note about the first two years of medical school at Indianapolis, I should end on a good one. Well, strike your own little tune and sing along . . .

Here's to all the babies born from Med Class 94, and here's to all those classes that were such a bore.

Here's to all Monday Night Die Hard parties, and here's to all those times playing euchre making me tardy.

Here's to all those intramural softball games played, and here's to thoughts of studying while getting ----

And here's to that thought of doing it all again. Yeah, right! Shoot me in the head, cuz I must be dreamin'!

Lafayette

Life in West Lafayette

We came to Lafayette with various backgrounds, representing schools such as Purdue, Indiana, Rice, Kabul, Brigham Young, and Olivet Nazarene. We came from places like West Lafayette, Lafayette, Indianapolis, Kokomo, Carmel, Losantville, Galveston, Albion, Fairmount, Vincennes, and Munster (with some roots in California, Utah, Wisconsin, and even Afghanistan). But despite different pasts, we united to work toward a common cause — making it through the first two years of medical school, and beyond!

First year brought many new experiences as we adapted to the lifestyle of medical school. We were warmly welcomed by the Wagners and Carolyn. Shannon, away on a secret mission, was not present at orientation (maybe he was at Ryan's?). Jenny brought our first medical emergency when she passed out the first week . . . What should we do? Carolyn met face to face with Resuci-Annie one night in Lynn Hall. Kelley amazingly served as a dorm assistant and still found time for school and for organizing our Secret Santas. Henry (Superman) and Liz turned white as they offered their arms as practice for venipuncture. David taught us surgery techniques as we completed the dog labs; Marc even operated one-handed (after Shannon revived our dog with epinephrine!). William gave rides to all, as he had an 'A' sticker; however, one day his car got stuck when he tried to go through a snow drift! Marc, the class photographer, recorded events such as the Bed Race, the ever popular Dr. Simon party, and class members asleep in Lynn Hall. Renee, Don (and Domino) opened their home for class parties. Renee and Dana remembered everyone's birthday with cards. Brian served as the AMA rep and rural Indiana consultant; Liz served as the Class rep. Several of us worked in the HME Programs during the summer, others did research.

Second year we learned how to do Histories and Physicals. We also faced the dreaded Oral Exams in Medicine. We welcomed the new class, and each adopted a freshman student. Darren started each day with a bran muffin and juice, before nodding off to sleep during Medicine. Wasima (cheerleader hair!) brought her hot tea each morning. Dana, a diligent student, existed on Diet Coke and bagels. Shaun revealed his ability to gulp down pizza, winning local contest. And Ghafoor, of course, won the beard-growing contest. Ghafoor and Mina celebrated the birth of their second daughter, Heela. We enjoyed volleyball and basketball at the Co-Rec, numerous birthday celebrations, a Halloween costume party, a Christmas party at Dr. Viste's, an Afghani party at the Bahas, and an end of the year party at Renee's.

Some days were long, but most brought learning and laughter. We supported each other and worked together. As we prepared for the move to Indy, we studied together for Boards, and everyone passed! We have continued to keep in touch and have treasured our friendships through junior and senior year. Class members are now interested in fields of Pediatrics, Family Practice, Internal Medicine, Psychiatry, Ob/Gyn, Surgery, and Dermatology/Anesthesia(?) which will again take us in various directions. And though many of us struggled at times, and some days brought frustration, I think that most of us will choose to remember the days in West Lafayette with a smile.

Muncie

My favorite memories of the Muncie Center are of the great comradery and friendships formed among the small groups of students there. I remember the many cookouts, watching IU-Purdue basketball (which IU invariably won), playing pool (when someone had not broken all of the cues) in the lounge, and the many lectures made unforgettable, even when the subject matter was not (one day in Immunology particularly stands out). Despite the many good times, we had our share of misfortunes such as the death of Dr. Kennedy and the dismissal of one of the students.

Dr. Duncan Kennedy was an excellent instructor in anatomy lab and a truly unique individual. His dramatic demonstrations and lectures, interspersed with colorful personal anecdotes, were among the most memorable that I have seen in medical school. I found seeing him in the hospital after just having had him the year before to be a very powerful experience for me. His was the first death that I was exposed to in medical school, and it really demonstrated a profound impact of my studies. Suddenly, the classwork wasn't just hypothetical situations, but rather was a real life-or-death crisis. I learned more about being a doctor from Dr. Kennedy than he ever could have realized.

South Bend

The South Bend Experience

I think that a quote from Dickens sums up our medical school experience at the South Bend Center best when he said "... it was the best of times ... it was the worst of times."

The worst academic memories are certainly those of cramming for that big head and neck anatomy exam with the dreaded secret model, or studying for the neuroanatomy "slide show" lab practical. There are, however, many other "worst" memories that fall a close second. We remember all too vividly the gripping fear the anatomy pointer could instill in the unprepared victim, or the chilling alarm clock quality of the histology lab timers. Fortunately, there were plenty of good times, too. We all had a chance to hone our party skills with the "intestinal limbo" in anatomy lab. And while pathology may have seemed deathly boring to some, no one will ever forget "Jence Bones" proteins in multiple myeloma. Just as no one will ever forget all the pharmacology material — "is that right?"

Much of the social "best times" revolved around those Fighting Irish. Whether it be cheering the football team to victory in sub zero temperature, or celebrating at that dive affectionately known as the "backer", Notre Dame provided us with many good times. We also must not forget the wonderful staff at the South Bend Center who provided guidance and support, not to mention many nice parties. The "worst" social times are undoubtedly the Friday and Saturday nights we spent in the library while many other successful college grads were out enjoying the rewards of a good paying job. Although some of us might have chosen to "rally" rather than study.

We began as strangers, developed into partners, and, finally, cultivated friendships that will last a lifetime. Each of us had his or her own set of "best" and "worst" times. But through it all, we might even become doctors.

Terre Haute

Patient's Name: Terry Hote

C/C: Insomnia, Social Dysfunction, and in general "My Brain Hurts"

HPI: I was originally placed in Terre Haute in 1990 with little or no understanding of what was to occur. A claustrophobic setting with 15 other people I'd never met before. Feeling febrile while in Holmsted Hall, I noticed everyone around me sweating profusely, and then suddenly I would get the chills, as if the furnace had quit. It was from that point on that I was never able to sleep or attend social gatherings, except for an occasional bobbing for kiwi or listening to orange-clad lounge lizards.

Meds: Tums, Caffeine, Tylenol, Caffeine, Seldane

All: Formaldehyde, Studying, Exams in general, City "Air"

PSHx: Brain Transplant

PMHx: Throbbing headache the morning after acceptance to medical school

FHx: No comment to protect the innocent

SHx: Single, divorced, married with and without kids, trying to get a date

Tobacco: occasional dip EtOH: prn IV Drugs: no comment

Education: I graduated from several small colleges throughout the country and never thought this would happen to me.

Activities: pianist/singer, terrorist, weight lifter, karate expert, Brain, Kappa, swami, Ninja Turtle mom, lounge lizard, etc.

Systemic Review of Terry Hote

Hair: big, with copious amounts of hair spray, usually blonde

Skin: under each others'

Smell: of unknown etiology, unpleasant, constant

Night Life: limited but amusing. Limited due to the amount of time and number of bars. Amusing due to the clientele and jovial "red neck" atmosphere. Occasionally involves gun fire.

Bank Machines: never would accept Bates' card

Most Unsuccessful Sport: elevator surfing

Most Favorite Bet: better test score has to buy lunch

Most Frequented Restaurants: fast food

Best Convenience Store: local state penitentiary, open 24 hr.

Dorms: loved by students and roaches alike

Best Billboard: enlarged painting of Larry Bird

Apartment Complexes: often involved interesting domestic violence — one made a national TV show as tenant stole keys and rummaged through women's accessories.

City Location: don't know due to closing of eyes while driving there

Assessment: Brain Hurts

Plan: 1. residency 2. travel 3. start all over again 4. tylenol and caffeine prn

Matters of Medicine in Maua

I will never forget my first day in Kenya. I was one of the many people traveling on a bus from Nairobi to Meru, a town just 40 km away from Maua, my final destination. It was 12/31/93, and I had gone from a chilly 20° with ice and snow to 80° with greenery and a refreshing breeze. Although I had been looking forward to this experience for the past 2 years, my mind was troubled by the recent events at home that resulted in the timing of my trip to be unfavorable. The family's first grandchild was due in early February, I was in the midst of wedding planning, and I had a major exam upon my return in March. In addition, I was quite nervous about traveling alone, as I had never before traveled internationally.

The bus ride was interesting. The men dressed in suit pants and coats. Animals, mainly cows, goats, and chickens, roamed the streets and sat at the roadside, amidst all the people. There seemed to be barefooted children everywhere. We were stopped many times by armed military personnel.

After 6 hours in an overcrowded bus, I was rushed to an even more overcrowded "matatu". Just picture an American equivalent of a mini truck with a cap on it, crammed with 20+ people in the back. Next, add a few live chickens, a few men hanging onto the bumper, and a speed of at least 120kph! One and a half hours and 1 flat tire later, I had arrived in Maua.

Nestled in the foothills of Mount Kenya, Maua was rural. The hospital compound was central and thus easily located. I found my way to the student dormitory, where I met Chris and Mark, 2 of the 6 medical students. Mark had contracted Malaria, and Chris was in the middle of a course of treatment for the spider bite to his left hand. I was terrified!

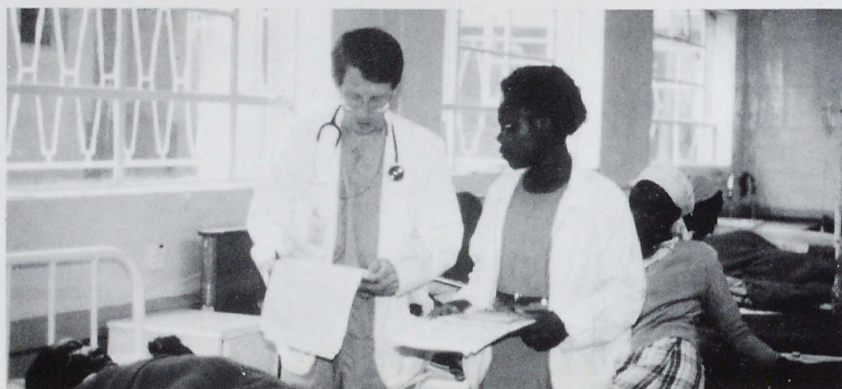

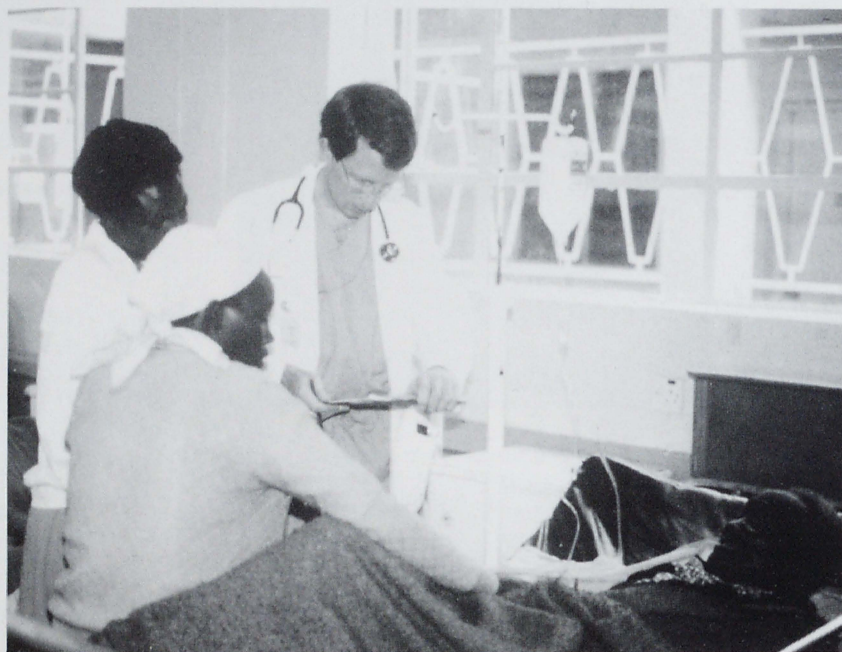

Since I would start on a Monday, I had the next 2 days to adjust to my new environment. It was a lot like camping — washing clothes by hand, taking cold showers, and cooking with kerosene, not to mention the mosquito netting.

My first week at the hospital was quite challenging. I began in Pediatrics, the largest ward, and there would be no doctors in the ward until the following week. I began early, for I had over 50 children to round on, most of which had diseases I had only read about in textbooks. The children were piled, 2-3 to a twin bed, accompanied by their mothers (also in the same bed). The smell was, at first, overwhelming, and there were flies everywhere. The smaller children often used the floor as a toilet, and I overheard a nursing student being scolded for wearing a pair of gloves to clean a wound full of pus. I began the week feeling inconfident, frustrated, and overwhelmed. I had to keep reminding myself that the decisions were up to me. For now, I was the "doctor".

During the second week, which was also spent in Pediatrics, I noticed a welcomed increase in my confidence level. I was comfortable diagnosing and treating pneumonia, malaria, marasmus, and kwashiorkor. At that time I saw a child die from the complications of measles, a disease which I had never seen a case of, needless to say a mortality as a result of, back home. In addition to ward responsibilities, I was introduced to the outpatient clinic, where I saw patients without supervision. It was then that my communication was transformed from the "international language" of smiles and gestures to some basic Kimeru. I began to learn more about the culture, and I was invited to some local homes.

Brian Shull served at Tenwek Missionary Hospital in Bomet, Kenya, June-August of 1993. At this 300 bed hospital, he worked on the pediatric, medicine, and OB wards. He also treated patients in a small outlying rural clinic and performed surgeries.

Curt Ward and Robert Tiller help to keep some migrant farm workers and their families healthy.

I was quite impressed by the knowledge the Kenyan school children possessed concerning the United States, and their English was much better than my Kimeru. As the friendships that formed began to tackle my feelings of homesickness, I found myself thinking more and more about my own culture's relative selfishness and extravagance. I felt guilty about having the seeming luxury of homesickness, while the people surrounding me struggled to survive. It was at this time that I began to funnel my energy, and I realized that I was one of many whose efforts would someday make a difference.

After 2 weeks in Pediatrics, I ventured to male ward for a week. This experience was similar to an ER rotation, as most of the patients were victims of assaults. I gained a great deal of experience with wound care while learning more about violent behavior and human relations. I marked the progress of a young man admitted with tetanus. He was the sole survivor of 5 men admitted with tetanus just prior to my arrival. By the end of the week, he was able to open his mouth a bit wider, and he could move his arms slightly. I planned to return to male ward in 1 week.

Female ward was my challenge the fourth week. With the help of a fellow student and one of the mission doctors, I presented a patient in Grand Rounds. She had a vesicovaginal and a rectovaginal fistula secondary to uterine rupture resulting from an obstructed labor at home. She was, according to the doctors, destined to become an outcast in her society as a result of her condition. I began to think about the role of women in their culture, perinatal mortality, inaccessibility to health care, compliance, and the importance of patient education.

By this time I had mastered my environment in the area of self care. The food and clothing preparation that had once been overwhelming was now quite routine. My Kimeru lessons continued, and I strived to meet my study goals. Night call, although still a challenge, seemed less anxiety provoking, probably since I had been exposed to each of the wards and a few weeks of outpatient care.

On week 5 I returned to male ward to find my tetanus patient attempting to walk with a walker! He was now feeding himself and could move his mouth enough so that he could speak intelligibly. I practiced many of my newly-acquired wound care skills, and I performed a lumbar puncture and chest tube insertion successfully. In the theater I assisted with some close reductions of fractures, as well as some skin grafting.

During my last week I joined the health care team in the outreach clinics, where the main focus was on family planning, antenatal care, and immunizations. The clinics in which I worked had good turnouts, and a lot of hard work was accomplished. Many of the mothers had walked several kilometers with their infants. Although some mothers were exhausted, the patient education sessions were filled with questions. The outreach clinics were one of the most rewarding aspects of the rotation.

On the final night I visited friends, took requested photographs and collected many addresses. The next morning, bright and early, I left. Having given away most of my material possessions to my Kenyan friends, I left carrying only gifts for my family and friends at home.

I left America with fairly narrow horizons, but a mind eager to learn and experience and a heart longing to lend a hand. Six weeks later, after one of the most challenging and enriching periods of my life, I began the journey home, never again to be the same person. For, it was in Maua that I learned a great deal about myself, about a culture entirely different from my own, and, through it all, gained a new perspective on health, life, and what it means to be a doctor.

FAMILY

There's no vocabulary for love within a family love that's lived in but not looked at,
love within the light of which all else is seen,
love within which all other love finds speech.
This love is silent.

- T.S. Eliot

Memoria

This page is dedicated to our loved ones who passed away during the last four years;
those without whom we would not be who we are today;
those we wish could be here with us today to share our joys as we succeed in achieving our dreams.

SENIORS

No one ever undertakes an art or a science merely to acquire knowledge of it. In all human affairs there is always an end in view of pleasure, or honor, or advantage.
- Polybius

A Father's Instructions For Life

Compliment three people each day.
Watch a sunrise at least once a year.
Overtip breakfast waiters/waitresses.
Look people in the eye.
Say "thank you" a lot.
Say "please" a lot.
Live beneath your means.
Buy whatever kids are selling on card tables in their front yards.
Treat everyone you meet as you want to be treated.
Donate 2 pints of blood every year.
Make new friends but cherish the old ones.
Keep secrets.
Don't waste time learning the "tricks of the trade." Instead, learn the trade.
Admit your mistakes.
Be brave. Even if you're not, pretend to be. No one can tell the difference.
Choose a charity in your community and support it generously with your time and money.
Read the Bill of Rights.
Use credit cards only for convenience, never for credit.
Never cheat.
Give yourself a year, and read the Bible cover to cover.
Learn to listen. Opportunity sometimes knocks very softly.
Never deprive someone of hope, for it may be all he or she has.
Pray not for things, but for wisdom and courage.
Never take action when you're angry.
Have good posture. Enter a room with purpose and confidence.
Don't discuss business in elevators. You never know who may overhear you.
Never pay for work before it's completed.
Be willing to lose a battle in order to win the war.
Don't gossip.
Beware of the person who has nothing to lose.
When facing a difficult task, act as though it is impossible to fail. If you're going after Moby Dick, take along the tartar sauce.
Don't spread yourself too thin. Learn to say no politely and quickly.
Don't expect life to be fair.
Never underestimate the power of forgiveness.
Instead of using the word problem, try substituting the word opportunity.
Never walk out on a quarrel with your spouse.
Regarding furniture and clothes: if you think you'll be using them 5 years or longer, buy the best you can afford.
Be bold and courageous. When you look back on your life, you'll regret the things you didn't do more than the ones you did.
Forget committees. New, noble, world-changing ideas always come from one person working alone.
Street musicians are a treasure. Stop for a moment and listen; then leave a small donation.
When faced with a serious health problem, get at least 3 medical opinions.
Wage war against littering.
After encountering inferior service, food or products, bring it to the attention of the person in charge.
Good managers will appreciate knowing.
Don't procrastinate. Do what needs doing when it needs to be done.
Get your priorities straight. No one ever said on his deathbed, "Gee, if I'd only spent more time at the office."
Don't be afraid to say "I don't know."
Don't be afraid to say "I'm sorry."
Make a list of 25 things you want to experience before you die. Carry it in your wallet and refer to it often.
Call your mother.

Graduation

There's supposed to be a cap, too . . . no!

That's how many $ in debt?!

Wait a minute — I'm in here somewhere!

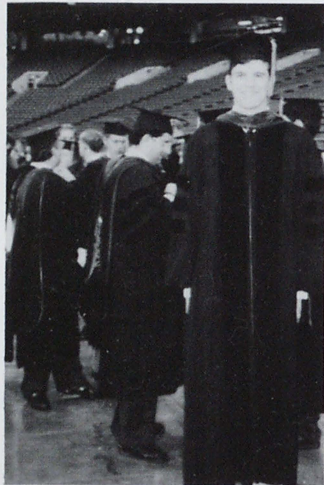

My 4 favorite years!

Rod with degree in hand. Scott follows.

Behind stage — 2 minutes prior to start!

I found my spot in line!

Whew! It's there and spelled correctly!

Fits great, but makes for a bad hair day!

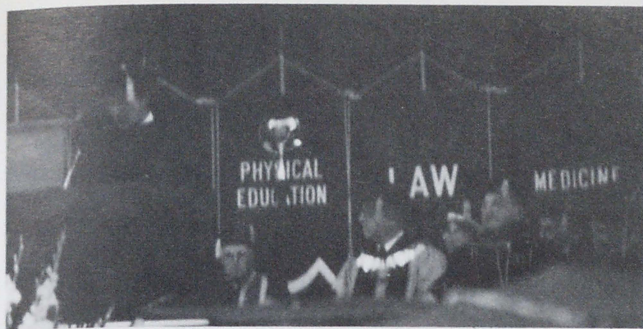

Andy — pay attention!

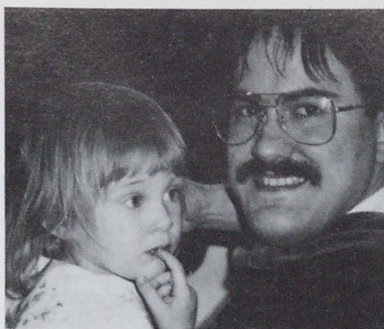

Audrey battles sleep.

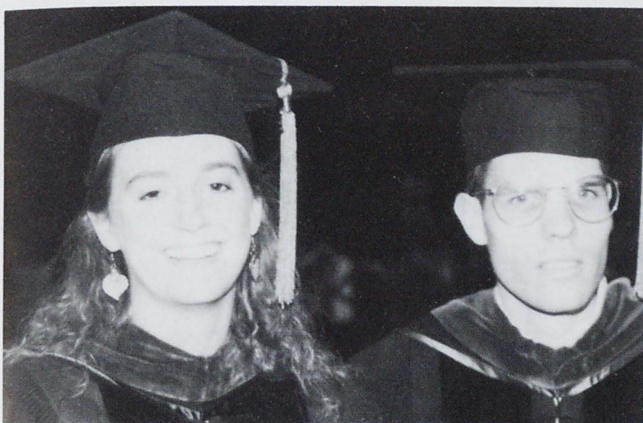

Notice the arrangement of the banners!

Two daughters proud of two daddies!

Guess which one has a May rotation?!

... and my new address is ...

West Virginia bound ... with rabbit ears!

I see more caps and gowns than hoods!

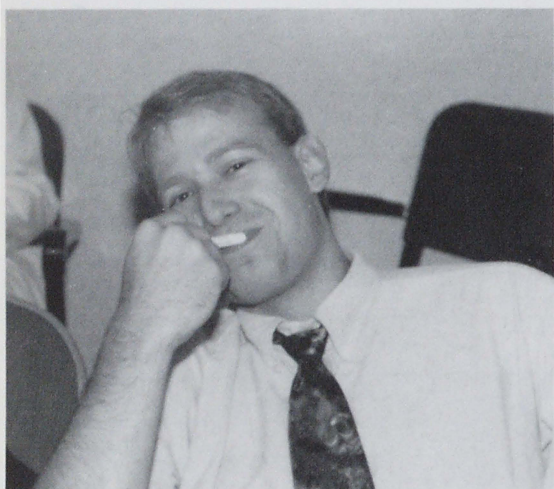

Cathy enjoys "hanging around" with friend Carl.

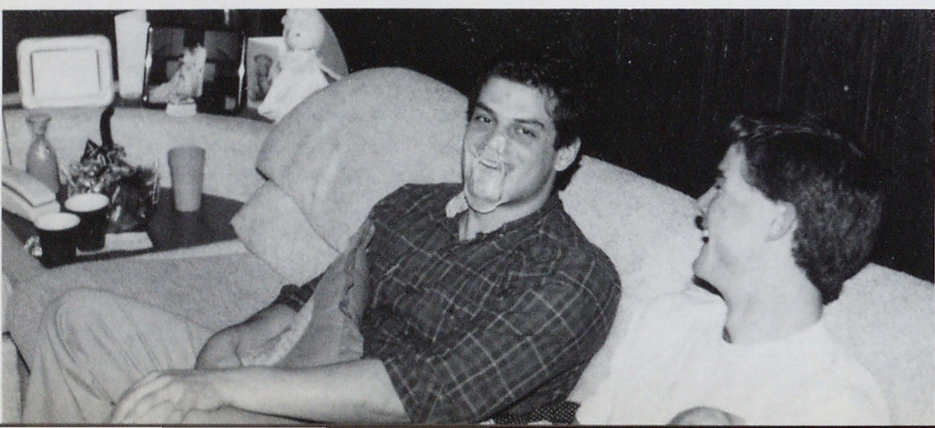

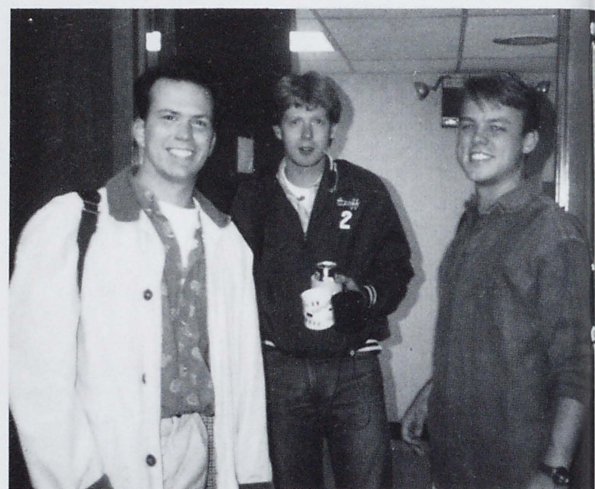

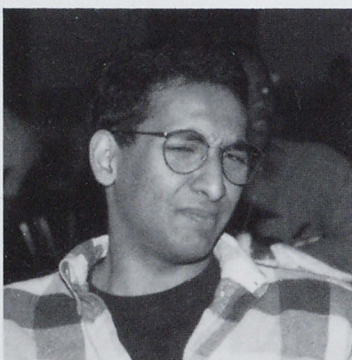

Keep in touch!

FAMILY ALBUM

The best inheritance parents can give their children is a few minutes of time each day.
- O.A. Battista

Mary Catherine Yoder

Opportunity, accomplishment, pride and relief are all spelled "MD" on graduation day!
Congratulations! We love you.
Dad and Mom

Heidi S. Ahlgrim

It was a lucky day for a lot of people when that thoroughbred lifted you off our feet. Now people can get repaired when they become injured or sick. Glad you changed your career path. Great dedication, Heidi. Go fix 'em.

Joseph C. Baer II

You will be a great doctor!

Richard R. Barnes Jr.

"Hey Mom, Hey Dad, I Happy!"

Jamie R. Bass

We are so proud of our daughter, Jamie Bass. — Mom and Dad

Christopher A. Bates

Chris, it's a long way from kindergarten cowboy to a medical doctor, but you made it, and we are all very proud of you. May God be with you as you use your talents and education to help the world. Congratulations and love always, Mom, Dad, and family

Kevin M. Bluemel

Candy pills and doctor bags were your dream tools as a lad — school complete — career begun — your proud family says "Well Done".

Catherine A. Bobenrieth

Cathy, Congratulations on becoming the first physician in the history of our family. We are so very proud of you. You have successfully traveled a most difficult road. We hope your path ahead is full of happiness and blessings.

All our love,
Mom and Dad

David A. Breitweiser

First day of nursery school to graduation, med. school has been a long path. Congratulations Dave.
“Now take time to go fishing” —
wise words from Dad.
Love Ya,
Mom and Dad

Lorinda M. Browning

Lorinda, you have made us so proud!
Dad and Diane

Corazon A. Cabrera

A job well done, we are proud of you.
Congratulations!

Audrey L. Cartwright

All your family and friends are proud of you at this special time, as well as always.

Steve P. Checroun

Always ready to win
Continue to be terrific
Mom and Pop

Geoffrey Chidsey

From kindergarten to medical degree,
Twenty years of tests, boards, and sweat —
Not to mention the ever mounting debt.
Quite a feat all would agree, so our congrats and good luck to you we beam
while of the promised cottage with cupola we dream. We love you,
Mom and Dad

Lisa K. Clock

Back then you “crawled” to a different drummer!
Congratulations!
You did it!
Love, Dad and Mom

James T. Croner

Christopher A. Cole

Wayne M. Ellis

“Who says I can’t be a doctor?”

Henry E. Degroot

Congratulations to our ‘Crown Prince’
and to Julia. Hang on to your wise and gentle spirit.
Love, Mom and Dad

Gregory L. Estes

Congratulations, Greg! "In all thy ways acknowledge Him, and He shall direct thy paths."
Love, Mom and Dad

Abigail Farr

Those memories of the happy little girl who always had a smile and a question and an insatiable interest in the why and how of all things about her — The school girl that set higher goals for herself without thought of the minimum — The many achievements she has always shared with her family — The ability to show
a joy in the achievement of others, and the love of life that she radiates. Abby, you have again given another reason for your Mother and Father to love you for choosing us to be your parents and friends.

Ardis B. Fisch

Way to go, Artis! Love, Mom and Dad
We knew you'd make it, and you sure did! — Grandma

Cheryl Fischer Ferguson

Michelle D. Fiscus

Dear Shelley,
It's wonderful realizing a dream!
Knowing that the little girl who filled our lives and hearts with joy has grown into a special woman surpasses all our dreams and expectations. We are so proud of the choices you have made, the goals
you have accomplished and the respect
you have earned. We wish you a wonderful and fulfilling life and love you very much . . . Mom and Dad

Douglas A. Flory

You're our #1!
Love,
Chase, Cara, Mom, and Dad

Glenn A. Glogas

Congratulations, good luck,
We Love You!
Mom and Dad

Joseph E. Grady II

You've always been a winner.
We are all proud of you.

Dorothea A. Griffiths

Words can't express how proud we are of you. We always knew you would succeed at what you wanted in life because of your determination to do your best.
Mom and Dad

Michelle R. Harrison

Michelle, you're the daughter every parent dreams of. We couldn't be prouder or love you more.
Love, Mom and Dad

Keith A. Harvey

Congratulations, Keith!
We are very proud of you. May God continue to guide you throughout your career.
Love, Mom and Dad

David B. Henley

David, Congratulations on yet another personal accomplishment.
Our pride is only overshadowed by our love for you.
Mom and Dad

Kerry R. Hensley

Congratulations, Kerry!
Love,
Mom, Dad, Carl, Debbie, Ron,
Lynn, Myron

Ivor B. Horn

Dear Ivor,
May The Supreme Being afford you His blessings infinitely. We love you,
Your Family

Patricia L. Johnson

Robert D. Kavelman

Robert, Congratulations! What else

can we say that we haven't already told you before? We know that you will make an excellent doctor, just as you are a husband and father.

We love you!
Lisa and Eric

Teaching anatomy to his sisters!
Congratulations!
Love, Mom and Carol

I knew you could make it! Dad Accept our heartiest
congratulations
on achieving your goal — for which you are so deserving. Be assured of our continued admiration and support.

Love and best wishes,
Eric and Catherine George

Gary J. Keepes

Gary, we are so proud of you.

Jason K. King

Congratulations, Jason! You stayed the course. May your gentle ways of childhood days always be with you.
Mom and Dad

Brian M. Kline

Even as a little boy, you were such

We all love you so much!!
Love,
Dad, Mom, Debbie and Grandma

Andrea Z. Ku

May May, God has not promised sky always blue, joy without sorrow or peace without pain, but He has promised strength for the day, grace
for the trial, love and help from above. Have confidence to search for your rainbow, yet also be brave to accept His will in your life.
Corinthians II 12:9
See! This is what I always get, a hand-me-down from my 3
brothers!

David J. Leszczyszyn

Something To Think About

If we could shrink the earth's population to a village of precisely 100 people, but all the existing nations remained the same, it would look like this:

There would be:      57 Asians
                             21 Europeans
                             14 Western Hemisphere People (Both Americas)
                             8 Africans

70 of the 100 would be non-white and non-Christian

30 would be white and Christian

50% of the entire world's wealth would be in the hands of only 6 people--all 6 would be citizens of the United States

70 would be unable to read; 50 would suffer from malnutrition; 80 would live in substandard housing, and only 1 would have a university education

We have a unique responsibility to use our resources and talents in ways which will improve our world.

As our newest colleagues, we welcome you to the profession of medicine and congratulate you on your recent achievement.

A distinguishing feature of a profession is the ability to work together for the common good of the profession and those they serve. We trust you will wish to be a part of this effort.

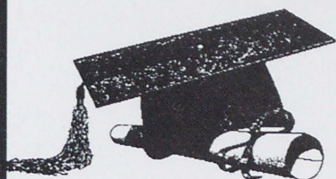

The Indianapolis Medical Society serves as your point of entry to the professional body of medicine. We extend this invitation to you to participate in our future. For membership information, call the Medical Society at 639-3406.

On behalf of your colleagues and teachers, here and nationally, we wish you continued success and offer to work with you in the future.

The Caduceus is a staff with two entwined snakes and two wings at the top. It originally was the wand of Hermes or Mercury, the messenger of the Gods. The Caduceus is said to have become a symbol associated with the medical profession in the 16th century when Sir William Butts, physician to King Henry VIII of England, adopted the double snake staff as his personal professional coat of arms. Since then, it has been adopted as the official symbol of several medical organizations, including the U.S. Public Health Service and the Army Medical Corps.

The Staff of Aesculapius is considered to be the true and proper medical symbol. This wand bearing a single entwined snake is the walking stick which was carried by Aesculapius, the divine healer of the Greeks and Romans. The knotty rod is a symbol of support for the weak and for renewal of life. The Staff of Aesculapius has been adopted as the symbol of medical organizations such as the American Medical Association and the Indiana University School of Medicine.
